

● Jimmy Choo Store by Christian Lahoude Studio, Xian – China

May 10th, 2015 by retail design blog

Jimmy Choo's 200-square-meter dual gender store in Xian, China introduces its open floor plan with a grand, four sided façade providing transparency into the store. The rounded corners and set back entrance areas with illuminated open shelving behind create a unique appearance to draw the visitors into the store. About one third of the exterior cladding is more opaque; whereas, the face of the store is open and inviting. Building on the new store design concept established by David Collins Studio, Xian's architectural history regarding Feng Shui principles is reflected in Christian Lahoude Studio and project architect Katharina Hoerath's design elements with exterior and interior spaces that create great harmony and symmetry.

store design

branding

visual merchandising

hotels & restaurants

exhibit design

furniture

lighting

materials

eco

fashion & design

about us | home | advertise |

Design: Christian Lahoude Studio

Photography: Eric Gregory Powell

store design

branding

visual merchandising

hotels & restaurants

exhibit design

furniture

lighting

materials

eco

fashion & design

about us | home | advertise |

store design

branding

visual merchandising

hotels & restaurants

exhibit design

furniture

lighting

materials

eco

fashion & design

about us | home | advertise |

Share this:

Share

12

Tweet

12

Share

2

tumblr:

Pin it

Email

Print

Posted in fashion | Tags: china, Christian Lahoude Studio, design elements, entrance, Eric Gregory Powell, floor plan, glass globes, gold, Jimmy Choo, marble floors, store, stores, walls, X'Fan